

BRITISH MINISTRY WITHOUT SUPPORT

Appeal to Country Would Probably Mean Liberal Victory.

LESSON IN LATE BYE ELECTIONS

Balfour, However, Likely to Ignore Expression of Popular Will.

NO WORKABLE OPPOSITION

Liberal Party, in its Unorganized, Practically Leaderless Condition, Unable to Take Over the Government—Eyes closed to the Main Issue.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The present British government no longer commands the support of the country. No one with any degree of independence and judgment can form any other conclusion in regard to the political situation. The wonder is that anyone should be surprised by the results of the three recent bye-elections. The volume of the revulsion of popular sentiment, indeed, is surprising, but the fact that it is taking place has been patent since the general election of two years ago. The fact is that a large section of the rank and file of the Liberal Unionist party has revolted against the present, or rather, the recent ministry. Dissatisfaction was rampant even before the election of October, 1920, but the Marquis of Salisbury was quite right in assuming that this would not be manifested at the polls so long as the war was still in progress.

No constituency was called on to vote before the peace agreement was actually signed venturing to record its displeasure. The reasons for this suspension of judgment are clear to every body.

Placing the Blame. The war from its inception until within a few months of its close, had been a series of ghastly blunders. Political and military feeling was almost unanimous, however, that those who were responsible for the situation must carry the war through, especially as the opposition offered an alternative which was hopeless in regard both to men and measures.

Patriotic Englishmen really had no choice but to support the Marquis of Salisbury until peace was attained. Now, however, the suppressed bitterness and dissatisfaction is eager to find expression. This feeling is incited by the widespread conviction that the scandalous defects in the country's military equipment will fail to call out any genuine reforms from the present authorities.

It is astonishing that the newspapers representing both parties today attempt to account for the government's triple disaster in the collapse of its support in the bye elections at Bury, North Leeds and Seven Oaks by references to "the education bill, the tax on corn, etc."

Main Point Overlooked. Not a single writer sees in the expression of popular will a determination to rebuke and punish a government which is solely responsible for the terrible sacrifices of life and treasure in South Africa.

It is true in national politics, as in other struggles, that an observer often sees more of the game than the player. It does not require the deepest insight to realize that the average Englishman is not only thankful that the Boer war is finished, but that he wishes it had never begun. Moreover, he means to administer a rebuke in the only way possible to those who began it.

That is the meaning of his voice in three constituencies which have spoken since peace was declared. That, and his resentment against the almost intolerable burden of the 7 per cent income tax and other war imposts.

The Warning Ignored. Prime Minister Balfour has the right, technically, to ignore the notice to quit which was contained in these three warnings. He may, if he likes, go on misrepresenting the country for five more years before relinquishing power, for it is not conceivable that a sufficient number of bye elections will occur to imperil the government's immense majorities.

He is quite justified in his refusal to go to the country by the fact that if he were defeated there would be no workable opposition minister available to take over the government. He will probably interpret the recent votes as a mandate to make some changes in the education bill, the public interest in which is largely fictitious, and no further notice will be taken of change of sentiment which is so obvious.

LONDON'S LATEST FAD.

"Luck Boxes" Supposed to Make Their Possessors Fortunate.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—A new fad in London is the carrying of "luck boxes," made similar to those worn by the Pharaohs of ancient Egypt.

Each box is made of ebony, and is about the size of an ordinary draughtsman. There is a trick opening inside, which contains an Egyptian eye.

The wearers of these lucky boxes are supposed to be free from all disasters and to prosper in affairs of love and business.

ONE WEEK'S EPIGRAMS.

Andrew Lang's Tribute to the Classical Learning of Americans.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Some of the epigrams made during the week are worthy of attention. Here are two of them: "The Americans, in classical scholarship, are quite our equals if not our superiors,"—Andrew Lang.

"I always said that the first object in my life was to do my work." This was the reason given by Gen. Christian De Wet for remaining in his stateroom writing a book and not joining the passengers in deck sports on the voyage from South Africa.

TEMPTATIONS IN SOCIETY.

George W. E. Russell Finds Less Intemperance But Gambling on the Increase.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—George William Russell has been writing some plainspoken things about the young men in society. He expresses the opinion, for instance, that intemperance is no longer one of the most urgent perils awaiting young men.

He gives one curious illustration, namely, that King Edward, by introducing the custom of smoking directly after dinner, killed the practice of heavy drinking. This, combined with the influence of church and social reformers and the medical profession, has produced an unmistakable improvement in regard to temperance.

Russell considers, on the other hand, that the perils of betting and gambling are seriously increasing.

REASON OF THE HEAVY ALPINE DEATH ROLL

Many Accidents Spring From Avoidable Causes.

Desire of Amateurs to Attempt Risky Feats—Unwillingness to Pay Experienced Guides Counts.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The series of accidents in the Alps reported this season has naturally provoked much comment in the newspapers. Many persons, especially members of Alpine clubs, have been writing to the papers, pointing out and marveling that the death roll has not been heavier. They deprecate any attack on the sport of Alpine climbing, which they maintain is as safe as any other sport.

They declare that nine-tenths of the accidents are due to causes which could be avoided, such as bad guiding and attempts by inexperienced amateurs to make such climbs as the Matterhorn and the Jungfrau without guides or by placing themselves in the hands of incompetent assistants.

Good Guides Costly. The question of economy often enters in, as good guides are very expensive, and they insist on having an ample sufficiency of assistants, proportioned to the number and experience of the party.

For this reason people who are anxious to climb, but who are unable or unwilling to incur the heavy expense, risk their lives with inferior guides.

Some commentators go so far as to suggest that some deaths are really suicides, the Alps offering an easy death which is not tainted by suspicion. Others say that "mountain madness," by which is meant the madness for mountain climbing, amounts in many cases to insanity.

One correspondent suggests that "the mountain climber and the English parson are the most dangerous type, and should be put in restraint like any other harmless lunatic."

NEW ENGLAND HAKMAN BUNCOS GENERAL MILES

Driven to Fitchburg at the Cabby's Request to Attend Non-Existent Reception.

LEOMINSTER, Mass., Aug. 23.—An enterprising hakman got the better of Gen. Nelson A. Miles during his visit to his sister here on Thursday. After dinner the general took a stroll downtown, unaccompanied, and called upon one of his aides, whom he had left at a hotel when he went to dine with the Merriams.

While at the hotel he was waited upon by a hakman and informed that he was wanted immediately at the Johnsonia Hotel, in Fitchburg. The message was a surprise to the general, who said that he had intended later in the day to go to that city by trolley, but if the people of Fitchburg had planned a little reception he would not disappoint them.

He told the hakman he would be ready to start at 2 o'clock. Promptly on the hour the hakman appeared at the Merriam household with the best turnout he possessed, and General Miles got aboard, accompanied by his wife and sister, Mrs. Mary J. Merriam, all dressed for a reception.

In about an hour the party reached the Johnsonia, expecting to be met by a committee, but, aside from an elevator boy, nobody was on hand to receive them. Nor could they find anybody who seemed to know anything about their coming or the message desiring the general's presence in Fitchburg.

The general expostulated with the hakman, to whom he had previously paid $1, and went into the hotel to find out more about the matter, asking the hakman to wait for him. But the hakman did not wait.

When the general's presence in Fitchburg was announced he was waited upon by a committee appointed for the purpose. No member of the committee knew about the hack, and all agreed that he had been humbugged.

MARIETTA OFF VENEZUELA.

But One American War Vessel Now Needed for Patrol.

Cablegrams received at the Navy Department state that two of the vessels engaged in watching the Venezuelan coast have started for the north.

The Topeka has left Puerto Cabello for Hampton Roads via San Juan and the Cincinnati has sailed from Lagunaira for Cape Haytien, where she will meet the Machias and allow the latter to proceed homeward to go into dry dock.

LONDON PROPHET SEES AWFUL THINGS AHEAD

Chronicle of Woe for Europe in a Few Years.

America Left Out—Seer Has His Predictions Published in Advertising Columns.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—There appears today in the most expensive columns of London's newspapers of the biggest circulation, one of the most curious advertisements ever published. It consists of a long prophecy, occupying two and one-half columns, and describing a series of momentous events which are to occur between 1906 and 1925, and which will culminate with the second coming of Christ and the beginning of the millennium.

The prophet is an individual who describes himself as the Rev. M. Baxter, of London, and his creed is another of those elaborate deductions from figures and signs in the books of Daniel and Revelations. He declares that what was formerly Caesar's empire will be divided between 1906 and 1925 into ten kingdoms including France, Germany, Russia, Italy, Spain, Austria, Greece, Turkey, Syria, Egypt and the Balkans.

These ten kingdoms will form a Latin confederacy which will be league against Germany and Russia. The prophet says that a lot of terrible things will happen in the ensuing ten years.

Poor America does not figure in the awful chronicle. Presumably because she has no place in Biblical history.

ESCAPED HUSBAND AND LAW BY TAKING FLIGHT

Mrs. Bibby Takes Her Children to New York.

Evades Service of Writ Directing Her to Produce Them in Court Monday.

To evade the service of a writ of habeas corpus directing her to produce her two children, Harold and Frances Vera, in court Monday morning, Mrs. Elmore M. J. Bibby, it is said, has gone to New York.

Mrs. Bibby left her home and also her husband at La Plata, Md., Monday morning and came to Washington and took lodging at 755 Seventh Street southeast. Mrs. Bibby, after following his wife and trying to persuade her to return home with the children, and receiving her refusal, appealed to the court to gain possession of the children.

Family Had Flown. When the deputy marshal visited 755 Seventh Street southeast yesterday he found that she had left with her baggage and children, saying that she was going to another part of the city. Her husband had suspicions, however, that she was going to New York to her relatives and instead of looking for her elsewhere went to the Sixth Street depot. There he learned that she and her children had fled a few minutes before taken passage for New York.

MAHARAJAH OF JAIPUR AND HIS GOD DEPART

Ruler Personally Supervises Embarkation.

AN AMUSING MISTAKE

Invitations Accidentally Addressed by London Society to the Tutelary Deity of the Indian Prince, and Thus Were Never Answered.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—One of the most picturesque sights in connection with the coronation was witnessed yesterday at Dover, when the Maharajah of Jaipur, the most important coronation guest from India, embarked on his return journey.

The Maharajah is a most scrupulous observer of his faith. He never undertakes a journey until the state astrologer has ascertained if the planets are propitious.

Thursday was the day originally settled on for his departure, and the plan was ruled that Thursday was the right day for the Maharajah to start, but at the last moment his London engagements interfered so that the departure had to be made by a deputy, Dabshur Rai Bahadur, the Maharajah's director of transports, going to Dover.

Journey by Proxy.

There the state astrologer decided that the journey from London to Dover had sufficiently propitiated the planets and Bahadur awaited his lord's arrival there. The Maharajah arrived promptly at 11:30 with thirty tons of personal baggage and 150 members of his suite, and immediately proceeded to the captain's bridge.

The Maharajah personally superintended the embarkation of his baggage, which was divided into two classes, secular and religious. The porters and a team of oxen were allowed to help handle the former, but none except the members of his own suite were permitted to touch the latter.

The most important items in the religious collection were Maharajah's family god, who was packed in a large wooden box marked with strange signs in Hindustani, and "with care" in English, and half a dozen vessels resembling huge vases, placed in two zinc tanks, and requiring four men each to carry them. These contained the sacred water of the Ganges.

The removal of the family god was the occasion of a religious ceremony. The high priest, in full vestments and jewelry, walked in front, muttering prayers, while four Hindoos carried the case, which was placed below and surrounded by a personal escort.

The secular baggage included a strange medley of articles purchased in London, such as several of the most modern rifles, silver-plated harness, a tricycle, a number of children's mechanical toys, like a horse bicycle, a clock-work engine and jumping jacks. While the entire suite of 150 swarmed on the deck in handling the baggage they chanted a song describing their cordial reception and how they improved their physical health during the visit.

An Amusing Mistake.

The Maharajah's devotion to his family god was responsible for a peculiar error on the part of several noble ladies in London, who wished to entertain him. The Maharajah's cards were engraved in Hindustani characters, and many invitations which were sent to him, couched in the third person, and addressed to his residence, received no acknowledgment, although his name was copied with careful accuracy.

Subsequently it was ascertained that the Maharajah's party was such that the family god occupied the place of honor on his visiting cards and his own was placed below it. Consequently the invitations were extended to the god, who apparently did not deem it answer such trivial things.

JOHNSON WILL AWAIT ACTION OF GRAND JURY

Waives Preliminary Examination When Arraigned on Charge of Shooting Major Armes.

Mr. J. Roland Johnson, charged with shooting Major George A. Armes at the latter's country home, near Chevy Chase Circle, on Thursday morning, was arraigned in Judge Miller's court yesterday on the charge of assault with intent to kill. He pleaded not guilty, and preliminary examination was waived by his counsel, Mr. Creed M. Pelton. Johnson was bound over to await the action of the grand jury at the October term of court.

Mr. Johnson has been under $1,200 bonds since he gave himself up on Thursday afternoon. When the question of renewing the bond came up the amount remained the same, no opposition being made by the District Attorney.

Major Armes was not present in court. Detectives Horne and Burrows and a number of witnesses were ready to testify. Detective Burrows had the weapon which is alleged to have been used by Johnson. It is a .32 caliber Harrington & Remington revolver. Mrs. Johnson, turned it over to the police the afternoon of the shooting, and it will be used as evidence before the grand jury and the Criminal Court.

COLORED BOY ARRESTED.

Detected in Act of Robbing Counters in Notion Store.

William Butler, a colored youth about sixteen years of age, was arrested in the Woolworth 5 and 10 cent store, on Seventh Street northwest, yesterday afternoon, by Special Officer Harry Hand, of the Third precinct. The boy was near the cologne counter when the police entered the store, and noticed something wrong in the lad's actions. From the perfume counter the lad moved to the lead pencil department. He is alleged to have been filling his pockets when he was under arrest.

When searched at the First precinct station about three dozen lead pencils and several dozen bottles of cologne were found.

SHORT STORIES FROM THE SMALL AD. PAGE

Announcement of "Sensational" Sermon Rescued a Man Who Was Floating Down Stream.

"It may sound curious," said a prominent church worker of the city a day or two ago, "but it had not been for a four-line notice which I saw on the short ad. page of The Times about a year ago, I do not think I should have ever joined the church."

"When I came to Washington," the young man continued, "I worked in one of the large executive departments. It was very easy, so easy, and I had soon contracted very loose habits of living. I drank, played poker, and shot craps. About two years ago I lost my job, but I could not leave my expensive habits."

"I existed for a while on the money I could borrow and win from my former fellow-clerks, because I was ashamed to go home and too broken in health by my excesses to do manual labor. I was drifting dangerously near the rapid."

"One Sunday afternoon, not being able to round up enough of 'the bunch' to start a poker game, I was dreadfully wondering how I was going to pass the evening. I picked up a day-old copy of The Times, more in idleness than anything else, and glanced lazily over it. My eye was caught by a small four-line notice on the small ad. page, the first printed in bolder type than the rest. It was the announcement of a so-called sensational sermon, and I determined to go and hear it."

"I had not been inside of a church for two years but I expected that preacher to amuse me. He did more than amuse me. He made me think. Now, I am not going to tell you that I was 'converted' immediately or anything of that kind. I simply thought about the things I had heard and went again. The result was that in three months I calmly and coolly decided to join the church and cast my influence on the side of pure living and good citizenship."

"I have never regretted the step, nor ceased to be thoughtful of The Times."

LAWN FETE IS GIVEN.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Thomas Entertain Commandry No. 2, K. T.

The lawn fete given Friday night by Sir Knight and Mrs. Frank H. Thomas at their home in Cleveland Park to the Sir Knights of Columbia Commandery, No. 2, and their ladies, proved a most delightful affair. The grounds were beautifully decorated for the occasion, as were also the large and imposing porches surrounding the building. There were about three hundred present at the fete, the purpose of which was to bring in closer relations those having a common interest in the commandery.

Entertainment of various kinds was furnished upon the lawns while a most excellent musical program was being rendered in the tastefully decorated parlor of the dwelling. The program included a piano solo by Mr. R. E. Bodger, a tenor solo "I Love You," Mr. W. D. McFarland; horn selection, Mr. C. H. Henney; a recitation by Sir Knight J. Harrower, and a mandolin duet by the charming hostess, Mrs. Frank H. Thomas, and Mr. H. W. Thomas, who were compelled to respond to several encores. A solo by Miss Sallie Nicholson, whose clear sweet tones insured a recall, was followed by the deep, rich contralto of Mrs. C. H. Henney.

STRUCK LAMP POST.

Conductor on Street Railway Meets With Painful Accident.

G. Y. Garrett, thirty years of age, who resides at 216 Murray Street northwest, and who is employed as a conductor, by the Washington Traction Company, met with a painful but not serious accident last evening about 9:45 o'clock while on his car. Garrett was standing on the running board collecting fares on his eastbound trip. At the corner of First and B Streets he was struck by a lamp post which was set quite near the track and was dashed from the car.

The Ninth precinct ambulance was quickly summoned and he was removed to the Casualty Hospital, where he received medical attention. It was ascertained that he was quite badly shaken up and painfully bruised about the back and shoulders. His head was also so seriously lacerated that it was found necessary to take several stitches in the wound. Garrett's condition was said not to be serious in the least, although he was unable to leave the hospital last night.

OUT OF SORTS.

Pleasant Way to Drive Away the Blues.

A food that will bring back health and rosy cheeks to the sick as well as please the palate of the healthy is a pretty good food to know about. A lady in Minneapolis says: "I am such an enthusiast upon the subject of Grape-Nuts that I want to state a few instances of its value that have come under my personal experience."

"It was taken ill with a serious stomach trouble, so ill that the slightest movement caused me pain and could take nothing into my stomach or retain even medicine or water. I had been two days without nourishment when my husband suggested trying Grape-Nuts."

"The nurse prepared some with warm water, sugar and cream and I took it hesitatingly at first until I found it caused me no pain and for ten days I took no other nourishment. The doctor was surprised at my improvement and did not resent my attributing the speedy cure to the virtues of Grape-Nuts. He said he had a case on record of a teething baby who grew rosy and fat on the same diet."

"Grape-Nuts are so salutary and delicious that it appeals to the whole household and where either husband or I feel generally out of sorts we try confining ourselves exclusively to the food for a day or two with the happiest results."

"For a year I have had for a neighbor a delicate girl—an epileptic—when I first knew her she was a mere shadow, weighing seventy pounds and subject to fearful attacks having as many as twelve and sixteen convulsions in a day. At such times she took no nourishment whatever. She had never tried Grape-Nuts and as my food seemed to increase her trouble at such times it was with difficulty I persuaded her to try it. But I told her of my experience and induced her to try a few spoonfuls."

"The taste delighted her and ever since she has made it her chief article of diet. The result has been wonderful: her improvement is the subject of remark with all who know her. The attacks are less frequent and violent, and she has gained twenty pounds since last November and her family attribute her improvement solely to Grape-Nuts."

CLOSE OF SHAH'S VISIT TO LONDON

Persian Monarch a Popular Favorite From the First.

TO START HOME TOMORROW

His Majesty Greatly Pleased With His Reception by King Edward and Queen Alexandra on Board the Royal Yacht—A Fortune in Jewels.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The visit of the Shah of Persia to London, which ends on Monday, has been in one sense a disappointment. He does not display the delightful but often embarrassing unconventionality with which his late father on his two visits took London by storm.

The present Shah is a man of considerable education, even from the Western standpoint. He has not offered, as his father did on more than one occasion, to purchase even one of his charming hostesses from her husband, although he admired and much praised the London policemen to an extent to express the desire that he would like to buy a few of them.

Nevertheless, the Shah was established from the first as a popular favorite. He is received with cheers whenever he appears at a place of public amusement, which even General De Wet or Lord Kitchener could not complain of.

An Impassive Monarch.

These demonstrations he receives, as he does nearly all attempts to entertain him, with the impassiveness fitting a despot whose titles are "the king of kings, shadow of God, center of the universe, the well of science, the footpath of heaven, the sublime sovereign whose standard is the sun, and whose splendor is that of the firmament; the monarch of armies numerous as stars."

Yet, every now and then he is able to break his oriental calm. A troop of performing dogs was the first thing able to betray him into more than a smile and a couple of French clowns provoked a hearty laugh.

On the majority of occasions the Shah appeared more simply clad than some of his suite, but several times he displayed magnificence, indicating the possession of greater wealth in precious stones than any monarch. One gentleman, who is an expert in these matters, after examining the Shah closely, said he were put up at auction at Christie's, as he stood, he would fetch at the lowest calculation £750,000 for the jewels that he was wearing.

Impressed by Reception.

Nothing seems to have pleased or impressed the Shah more than his visit to the King at Cowes. The military pomp of his reception and the royal salute fired by the warships, which were dressed in his honor, evidently pleased him, while the King and Queen on the royal yacht effected a complete conquest of the Shah, who was undisguisedly taken by the King's reception.

All the onlookers remarked this point particularly. The correspondent of the Times, in describing the leave-taking, says the Shah appeared almost unwilling to go. King Edward and the Shah shook hands and saluted again and again, but still he lingered, talking almost eagerly, and certainly with far more animation than has been seen during a reception of the Shah on any other occasion.

Made Train Slow Down.

On the return journey to London the Shah, a few miles outside of Portsmouth, stopped the train, complaining that it was going over twenty-five miles an hour, which is the highest speed it will travel on land. When he crossed the channel he only allowed the crack steamer to go at the rate of twelve knots an hour.

This dislike of high speed is not due to nervousness, but to the fact that it caused a feeling of nausea.

ANOTHER OIL GUSHER.

Heywood No. 2 Broke Loose at Jennings, La., Yesterday.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 23.—Another oil gusher, known as the Heywood No. 2, has broken out at Jennings, La., it was reported yesterday.

The oil was thrown up to the height of 150 feet. The new gusher is some distance from the other gushers and adds considerably to the proved oil fields.
